MAY EXTEND "GAS" RATIONING TO ENTIRE NATION JULY 1ST

Average Motorist To Be Allowed 2½ to 5 Gallons Per Week

DEFENSE WORKERS HIT

War Production Officials Are Said To Be "Extremely Worried"

By Jack Vincent
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 23 — Government officials today forecast that gasoline rationing effective in 17 Eastern States on May 15, limiting the average motorist to 2½ to 5 gallons of motor fuel a week, will be extended in some form to the entire nation about July 1.

While the office of Price Administrator Leon Henderson arranged details for the rationing along the Eastern Coast, Army and War production officials in Washington are pictured in informed quarters as "extremely worried" over the entire transportation problem, particularly in getting defense workers to and from munitions plants.

To force the nation to conserve cars and tires, the rationing system may be extended on a nationwide basis although no actual gasoline shortages now exist in most areas. The step may also be necessary to prevent defense workers in Eastern Coast States from starting a mass migration to defense plants in "gasoline plentiful" areas.

Other steps being discussed to restrict motorists included:

1. A nation-wide 40-mile-an-hour speed limit.

2. An order to force motorists to surrender all tires they own in excess of five.

3. A bill to allow the Government to requisition private cars either for military use or for resale to defense workers.

All three steps, it was learned, were discussed at a secret meeting of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. War Department attorneys were instructed to find out whether it would be constitutional under President Roosevelt's war powers to enact a countrywide speed law. To the WPB went the proposal for requisitioning private cars, with the committee indicating that it would accept any recommendations made by officials of the war agency. The tire-surrender proposal, it was reported, will await recommendations from Henderson.

The Price Administrator in a swift and surprising move brought the war home to the 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 motorists along the Eastern Seaboard when he announced card rationing of gasoline will start May 15. According to Henderson, the program will be temporary, and will be replaced by a rigidly controlled permanent system on July 1.

Under the interim plan, every car owner—if he wants gasoline—will be forced to register at elementary

NAME THE CHORUSES

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 23—"Blue Moon," the Bensalem High School operetta which is to be given tonight and tomorrow evening, is expected to have one of the most talented casts in Bensalem operetta experience.

The cast is headed by Bernice Fischer, a charming Sophomore chirper, whose voice will send you "out of this world." Her male lead is "Bill" Johnsen, a talented newcomer, who is also a sophomore.

One of the outstanding musical numbers of the production is the "Moon Lady" number, capably performed by Helen Perkins and a sensational chorus.

The large supporting cast includes: Betty Judd, the well-liked star of last year's operetta, "Rose of the Danube;" Lester Engle, Peter Everett, and Charles Rittenhouse, also of last year's production; Amelia Sullivan, a talented Senior; and Ann Digirolamo, the little "spitfire," who appeared in "320 College Avenue."

The leading supporting player is newcomer Margaretta Wiedecke. Andrew Babesh, who made a hit in last year's school play, returns to appear in another supporting role.

The comedy of "Blue Moon" is executed by the veteran Bensalem performer, Owen McGarity; Constance Johnson, who made such a hit in "320 College Avenue;" and DeWitt Spencer.

GENERAL MARTIN PLANS TO AID THE FARMERS OF STATE

Candidate for Republican Nomination for Governor Makes State-Wide Broadcast

TO AID IN WAR CRISIS

Pledges To Use His Influence In Relieving Farm-Labor Shortage

SUNBURY, Apr. 23—Pledging his help to the farmers of Pennsylvania during the war-time crisis, Major General Edward Martin, candidate for the Republican nomination as governor waged his campaign yesterday through the agricultural belt of the Keystone state.

In a State-wide broadcast, Martin promised to give every assistance in relieving the farm-labor shortage and to use his influence to obtain proper equipment and supplies for farmers.

"We must not forget that armies must be fed," he said. "We must not forget that farms as well as armies must have manpower.

"I want to assure you that as Governor of Pennsylvania, I will give every possible help to the farms and farmers of this Commonwealth."

Also, he promised to keep the State's road system open so that supplies and farm products can be moved to their markets, using local road-building material if "war priorities stop the use of asphalt, cement and steel."

General Martin's address follows:

For many days now I have been passing through some of the most beautiful country on this earth—the farm counties of Pennsylvania. I have watched Spring coming into its green valleys, over the rolling acres of plowed lands and through the orchards about to break into bloom.

I want to talk, now, to the people who live on the 170,000 farms of Pennsylvania. To the millions of Pennsylvanians whose fertile acres feed the men behind the guns—to these farmers who stand behind the workers in the plants, the shipyards and the mills.

This war is reaching back all the way to the last man and the last woman on every last acre, to every forgotten village and every lonely road in the State. Every farmhouse, every field, and every orchard will feel the shock of this conflict.

Because I am a candidate for wartime Governor of Pennsylvania, I want to tell you why I am a candidate. I want to tell you why I feel I can serve you and all other loyal Pennsylvanians in the four dangerous years that are coming.

My deepest desire was to lead the men of the 28th Division—the men I had trained for combat duty in this war. That I cannot do. Under Army Regulations—whose wisdom I do not challenge—I am overage for my rank for combat duty, or for training combat troops.

In this war then, I must be a noncombatant. If I must serve as a noncombatant—then I am convinced that I can best serve in my own home

Collects From Clergyman

(By "The Stroller")

Pan-handling is becoming a revived art in Bristol. Police have made numerous arrests recently and 30-day sentences have been meted out to those found guilty, but still it continues.

Yesterday I saw a well-known clergyman being "held-up" on Radcliffe street, and given a "sales-talk" by a well-known town character. Evidently it was a good "sales-talk" because the preacherman "gave-up" and we saw him put his hand into his pocket and hand over some coin.

Undoubtedly the clergyman was touched by the plea which generally is for a "cup-of-coffee."

EFFECTS OF VARIOUS RATIONING LAWS ARE BEING FELT

Groceryman Unable To Get Tires For His Delivery Truck

LAW IS GIVEN BRIEFLY

Farmers, Too, Will Have Difficulty in Delivering Produce To Consumers

Since the laws which govern the rationing of automobile tires has become operative, the public is becoming more and more surprised over the extent to which their prohibitive power extends. Recently a groceryman applied to the Tire Rationing Board for a certificate for two tires for his delivery truck. To his surprise he found that the Federal Tire Rationing Regulations particularly specified that certificates could not be issued for trucks used to convey commodities to consumers.

A Courier representative made an investigation and following is a copy of the provisions of the Federal Act which govern this particular case:

(I) "Certificates may be issued for trucks used to transport raw materials, semi-manufactured goods, and finished products and foods, but no certificates may be issued to transport commodities to the ultimate consumer for personal, family, or household use."

(II.) "No truck equipped with tires or tubes for which a certificate has been issued under this paragraph shall be used to deliver foods to a consumer for personal, family or household use, or to make such deliveries of other commodities from a department store, grocery store, or similar retail sales outlet."

These provisions of the Federal Tire Rational Regulations will fall heavily upon those businesses which deal in commodities and use trucks to deliver goods to the consumers. These provisions will also fall heavily upon the consumers as they will affect the grocery stores, milk depots, butcher shops, department stores, and all other busi-

By International News Service

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 23 — One thousand of the 8,700 new housing units to be constructed by the National Housing Administration will be erected in the Philadelphia metropolitan area.

Sites for the Philadelphia area homes have not yet been selected, an NHA spokesman said today, but will be worked out with local authorities in Philadelphia, Delaware, Montgomery, and Bucks Counties in Pennsylvania, and Camden, Burlington and Gloucester in New Jersey.

The funds for the 1,000 units will be made available immediately, it was announced in Washington, and priority aids will be given private builders in their part of the program. Of the new construction, 800 homes in the Philadelphia district will be permanent and 200 classified as "demountable."

With the announcement last night that additional housing projects were planned speculation was aroused as to the possibility of an increase in the number of houses at the Defense Housing Project now in course of construction here.

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERNAN
(I. N. S. Staff Writer)

Mrs. Joe Citizen is not complaining—she is just wondering.

She used to give the kids peanut butter because it was a cheap spread. It has doubled in price.

The kids go down for an ice cream cone and come back for another penny—they're gone to six cents.

She paid 15 cents apiece for the pork chops she put in front of Joe last night—and pork is parceled out as a surplus commodity to the food stamp clients.

Joe reports that the coffee pot on his corner has "run out of large containers"—that's what they told him—and is getting a dime for the tiny container of coffee the office boy brings to his desk at noon.

So Mrs. Joe Citizen is wondering.

She is wondering if maybe a little offside boosting isn't going on.

She isn't complaining—yet—because Leon Henderson has pegged sugar at six cents a pound and he's done a lot of other good things but she thinks he'll have to do more.

Thought for the day: Chisel while you work.

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

German Fears Aroused

London—Strong indications that British Commando raids and ceaseless Royal Air Force attacks throughout the length and breadth of Europe have aroused German fears of a full-scale United Nations invasion were reflected in dispatches reaching London today.

As British planes lashed out at Le Havre in France and Germany's industrial Rhineland, as well as vital points in Nazi-occupied Sicily, all signs pointed to mounting German jitters over the immediate future.

(Editor's Note—Stockholm reported an air raid alarm for 90 minutes in the Danish capital of Copenhagen during the night. It was the first alarm in almost two years and apparently caused widespread panic. There were no indications that bombs were dropped on Copenhagen itself but explosions were reported heard nearby.)

Berlin correspondents of Stockholm newspapers confirmed recent reports that the Germans are constructing a new "Siegfried Line" of concrete barricades, artillery batteries and a chain of airdromes along the Channel coast.

To facilitate this construction, the British Ministry of Economic Warfare announced yesterday, the German high command has requisitioned 50 per cent of France's cement production.

There is evidence that 85 per cent of Germany's armed forces now is engaged on the Eastern Front, leaving only a comparatively small number to police the occupied areas and guard against invasion.

United Bomber Shot Down Three Jap Fighters

Melbourne—A United Nations bomber, protecting a crippled companion plane, shot down three of seven attacking Jap Zero fighters and finally routed the enemy war birds, a report reaching Melbourne from an advanced base disclosed today.

At the same time details were divulged on the daring exploit of Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett with a fleet of Nippon fighters when the United Nations air commander returned to his base from an inspection of Allied airfields at Port Moresby, New Guinea.

The lone bomber which performed so magnificently in helping its companion return safely to its base was one of six United Nations planes which were attacked by a force of 20 Japanese Zeros, the report said.

Predict Price Cutting in "Gas"

New York—The gasoline rationing order will result in widespread price cutting, Sol A. Herzog, general counsel for the Eastern States Gasoline Dealers Conference predicted today. Herzog's organization represents some 90,000 gasoline dealers.

"Rationing of gasoline on a consumer basis will throw many dealers out of business and, I predict, will start a devastating price war," Herzog said.

"With sales limited as to quantity, filling stations will have to rely upon volume of customers in order to show a profit. There will be widespread price cutting and the effects will be calamitous."

DEFENSE HOUSING PROJECT HERE HAS BEEN NAMED "BRISTOL TERRACE", THE NAME APPLIED FOR MANY YEARS TO DEVELOPMENT ON OPPOSITE SIDE OF ROAD

Bristol, Pennsylvania, Defense Housing

FEDERAL WORKS AGENCY
PUBLIC BUILDINGS ADMINISTRATION
WASHINGTON

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER
IN REPLYING, QUOTE THE ABOVE SUBJECT, BUILDING, AND THESE LETTERS —Information

Mr. Serrill D. Detlefson
Editor
The Bristol Courier
Bristol, Pennsylvania

April 22, 1942

Dear Mr. Detlefson:

This is to advise you that Commissioner Reynolds has approved the name "Bristol Terrace" for defense housing project (PA-36281). This name was submitted by Attorney Paul J. Barrett of Bristol.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) GERARD T. BEECKMAN,
Acting Chief of Information Service

Authorities at Washington have selected a name for the Defense Housing Project in Bristol Township on Beaver Dam Road, the Courier was advised this morning. The name selected is "Bristol Terrace" and is the same name that has been applied to that section in which the Project is under construction for a number of years. When that section of Bristol Township was first developed as a residential section the developers named it "Bristol Terrace."

A few weeks ago when the Defense Housing Project was started the Federal Works Agency, Public Building Administration, Washington, D. C., began a search for a name to apply to the project. The authorities at Washington wrote to the Courier and solicited its co-operation in naming the Project. The Courier in turn requested its nearly 12,000 daily readers to suggest a name.

The Courier readers at once took up the idea and wrote letters suggesting many names.

The name suggested and which was finally adopted is credited to Paul J. Barrett, well-known Bristol attorney. A number of Courier readers signed a petition giving their approval to Mr. Barrett's suggestion.

In his letter to the Courier, Mr. Barrett wrote: "That section has been referred to, by that name (Bristol Terrace), for many years by the people of Bristol and I feel that the new Housing Project should assume that title."

The tract on the west side of Beav-

AXIS OIL SHORTAGES

A nation dependent upon imported oil which uses it extravagantly is headed for eventual crisis. The Germans, in grounding most of their planes all winter, revealed that either they were husbanding their supplies or that their ersatz oil was not satisfactory in cold weather. Spring moves by the Germans seem to verify that they will go after the Near East oil.

Japan, also, faces a positive shortage of high octane gasoline and lubricating oils, at least by autumn. If the Japs proceed to invade Russia, thus further widening their extensive operations, their imported oil is bound to dwindle. The land occupied by the Japs in the Dutch East Indies contains oil, but scorched-earth policy, carried on by the Dutch with realistic ruthlessness, ruined refineries and wells throughout the Indies.

The Japs tried to refrain from bombing such installations, but retreating United Nations forces wrecked them. Experts say Japan can not soon get new machinery to resume oil pumping and gasoline production, nor have they the technicians to repair damaged parts.

Certainly Allied counter-attacks will not spare any restorations that the Japs might attempt. If sufficient bombers are sent to the Far East to harass them, the Japs will get little oil from immediate reclamation efforts.

There is oil in Lower Burma, but this, too, is being destroyed by retreating British and Chinese forces. As long as the Allies hold Upper Burma, the vital Burma Road will remain open. From the Rangoon hinterland railhead at Lashio the route becomes a motor highway winding northward into uninvaded interior China. Although Rangoon is gone, there are still rail and truck connections with the India railway from points southwest of Lashio are screened by the Lushai hills.

FIORELLO RIDES AGAIN

Men who are just boys grown up have more and more occasion to envy Mayor (Fire-fighting) Fiorello LaGuardia. His honor has a new thing in breath-taking, on-the-go treasures—a "war car," no less, with top painted white and body green.

And get a load of this, fellows. On the green hood are the initials "NYC" and five white stars signifying metropolitan boroughs—one better than a full general's four regulation stars. In case of blackouts, there are two red emergency lights protruding from the front fenders. And the front of the car bears the shield of the mayor of New York City and five more stars. On the white top there is a red panel which, when lighted, flashes "Mayor" in a red glow.

Thus the mayor's perfectly understandable craving for noise and excitement has found the last word in "outs" from the law's delay and the insolence of office crasher that Fiorello's patient merit might otherwise have to keep on taking. At the same time, he gives the public a thrilling treat and pedestrians a chance to see stars without getting hit.

In the circumstances, any night—preferably about theater time—would do nicely for a sort of Fiorello Revere's ride to rouse the Manhattan citizenry to the coming of the Germans—with some distinguishable horn-blowing to signify whether by land, air or sea. Inferentially, the car has a sky-view top.

Many suggestions were made incorporating the name of MacArthur in honor of General MacArthur.

Crime at Castaway by EDITH BRISTOL

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

"Walter's always borrowed pretty heavily at the Gallina bank—his credit was always good," went on Martha. She was talking to herself almost as much as to the sheriff and I could see that thoughts were crystalizing as she spoke. "But lately he's told me, not once but several times, he didn't want to get involved with any more big loans. I could tell that my brother was dreadfully worried, Nate. I knew that. So he might have accepted a cash compromise from Durfee. Although he would have hated to do it."

"That's what I figured," Allen said. "I thought we'd just keep the money dark for a while and see what happened. The coroner did ask Kobe under oath if he found any money in the room."

Now it was Martha's turn to nod. "I noticed that. But he didn't ask Worth Durfee about the money. Why was that?"

"I thought we'd let that ride. Then maybe we could trace one of the bills, if the thief felt secure enough to pass it."

"But how?"

"Seems Durfee drew a check for $5,000 the morning of the day your brother was killed. He asked for it in twenties and hundreds. Maybe the bank in Gallina isn't used to forking over that much cash. Or maybe they know Durfee for a queer customer. Anyhow, they took the numbers on the bills."

"That was smart of the bank—but why would the thief be so foolish as to try to pass one of the stolen bills around here?"

"People who commit crimes do some strangely foolish things. If they didn't, we'd have a harder time than we do catching up with them. That's the reason I haven't told anybody—except Lance—about the missing money. I've been hoping for some foolishness to give us a break. We're still looking for the gun. I'll have every inch of this ranch gone over before I'm through. And I'm still checking and rechecking the alibis of everybody who might benefit by Walter's death. But I'm pinning some hope to that money. If, of course, there really was money left in Walt's room," he added.

The telephone rang in the hall and I answered it.

"It's for you, Sheriff," I said, covering the mouthpiece with my hand. "Will you take it here or shall I plug it in on the living room extension?"

"It's O. K. in here," he said.

"Bring it in, child," added Miss Gregg, "the poor man's so tired he's about ready to drop."

I carried in the telephone and Allen took it. "Yes, this is Allen . . . Yes, Donovan, what's up . . . You don't say?" He sat up and his tired eyes gleamed. "The devil, you say! When? Where? . . . I mean how long ago? There's somebody ringing in on this line—"

Another interval while Donovan, the deputy at the other end of the wire, filled the instrument with sounds. Allen looked at his heavy gold watch with the big elk's tooth.

"Ask the teller and the president to wait for me, will you? I'll be there in under a half-hour. Much obliged."

He dropped the instrument into its cradle and turned to Martha.

"Maybe that hunch was right."

"Why? What's happened?"

"One of the bills has turned up. A twenty-dollar bill. Cashed at a drive-in market on the Gallina highway."

"But who cashed it?" Martha moved with him toward the door, the dogs trailing after. "And when?"

"The teller says it came in this morning for deposit, must have been cashed yesterday afternoon. We'll try to find out who . . ."

"But drive-in markets sell to many customers, hundreds of customers, who live any place between San Diego and Eureka. It's not like the neighborhood grocery stores where the clerk knows the customers," Martha said regretfully.

"It may lead nowhere, rapidly," Allen admitted, jamming the broad-brimmed felt on his head. "But at least it's better than nothing to work on. And it does help bear out Durfee's story that the money was stolen from Gregg by whoever killed him."

* * * *

One of those days when everything possible goes wrong!

That was the day following—a few scribbled lines in my little blue diary, so much neglected of late, recall the series of minor annoyances that filled the next forenoon.

The telephone trouble-shooters came over from Gallina, first, to find out what caused that constant clicking in on the ranch line when anyone spoke and in the frequent conversations of the last few days the clicking had grown increasingly troublesome.

"Absolutely nothing wrong with the instrument, lady," the brawny lineman assured Martha. "Nor with the lines, either. Only thing that might cause that ringing on your line that you hear all the time is someone taking down the receiver on one of your connections."

"But the only outside extension in use is the one at the stables," Martha protested. "And the boys in the stable are out all day. They're not listening in on conversations from the ranch house."

"Could be from the extension in the little house in Hidden Cove," volunteered the trouble-shooter.

"No." Miss Gregg was emphatic. "I ordered that extension disconnected some months ago."

"Yes, ma'am." The lineman was just as emphatic in return. "But I came out about a week ago and connected that phone up again."

"But I didn't order it connected!" Martha stared.

"I wouldn't know about that, lady. All I know is I got orders to come out and connect it up—I remember, it was just before that big blow we had, a few days back, for I had to ride out again next day over almost the same route to check on wires and poles."

Martha bit her lip. She was plainly puzzled. And annoyed, as well, I could tell from her expression.

"I'll call the Gallina office and find out who ordered it connected—" Martha said. But Sheriff Allen came in before she had time to carry out that determination.

The sheriff's first report was on the stolen twenty dollar bill—and a negative one, I knew from his first words.

"That bill came into the drive-in market in the rush hour of the late afternoon, day before yesterday. The cashier has been having hysterics all over the place ever since we began to question her. If she'd had to make change for the bills, she says, she'd remember who it was. Might have been suspicious. That is, if the customer had bought a few cents worth and asked for the rest in change. But she says the customer, whoever it was, bought a big bill of groceries — something over twelve dollars, had it carried out to an automobile, took the rest in change and it was all so regular that neither she nor the boy who carried out the purchases remembers. I've been working them over for three solid hours! What groceries? Anything special about the order? We checked every item on the sales slips.

"What kind of a car and who was driving it? Man or woman? Young or old? Where was it parked? Where did the boy put the groceries? Tonneau or back seat?" Allen pushed a weary hand through his grizzled hair.

"All we got for our pains was hysterics from the girl and sulks from the boy . . . 'too much of a hurry to notice,' they said. 'Just a plain car, they didn't notice the make'—one said it was a woman driving; the other swears it was a man who made the purchases. Nitwits!"

"Then there's not much hope—not much chance of learning anything from the money, is there?" Lance looked discouraged.

"Not from that bill. But remember, Lance—whoever passed that one has no reason to suspect that he's being watched. The very fact that he got away with that so safely will make him more careless. I'm disappointed but not discouraged. This proves that the thief is in this locality—or was day before yesterday."

"And automobiles travel 75 miles an hour—" Lance said grimly.

"Not legally—"

"What is there legal about this whole business?" Lance said. "What is it, Kobe?"

"Please, I'm liking to talk"—at the door the little brown boy hesitated.

"Go ahead, Kobe. We're all ears," Lance was encouraging.

"Please, Miss Gregg is thinking my month is completed soon and she is wishing me to return to the city."

"That's only because I don't want you to be out of work, Kobe," Martha put in. "There is nothing more for you to do here, you understand?"

"Thank you, but I'm liking to stay, working where I am useful. I am studying my textbooks, staying until you are finding out who have done the shooting." He looked from Lance to Allen to Miss Gregg, hoping to find a favorable answer from one of the three, his teeth showing in a wide smile. "I finding better job after that is known."

"The boy is right, Aunt Martha!" said Lance. "He stands a better chance for his next job when we can give him a clean bill of health—I mean when we can clear this mess up and give everybody a clean bill of health except the person who's responsible."

"Another point," Allen volunteered, "I'd like to keep the people here, as long as possible, who were here the night of the killing. You never can tell when something may come up and I'll need to question them more fully."

Martha promptly agreed. "It was only because the need for Kobe seemed to be gone since Walter is no longer here," she explained. "But if it means anything to you, Nate, and if it helps him, certainly he'll stay on."

Smiling and showing all his white teeth again, Kobe started from the room just in time to meet Estelle at the door and only avoided running into her by stepping back quickly.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

FROM an increasing number of sources comes confirmation that the kitchen front is vital to our wartime effort. Latest factory reports show that wartime-installed "snack bars" to feed workers in-between meals give workers quick energy, increases output, as well as helps hold down accident rates.

The "snack bars" in factories have been placed on a scientific basis, and are designed to give the energy which might be missed in regular meals.

But in the home, the same quick energy for daily routines can be given the family with proper selection of foods that make up the family meals.

Nutritious, properly balanced meals aren't hard to arrange at this time of the year, when markets overflow with flawless viands.

Beef and lamb continue to be the "best meat buys" this week. Small size roasting chickens are a special in the East.

Vegetables continue to show lower price tickets. Price drops are recorded for asparagus, green beans, brussels sprouts, iceberg and Boston lettuce, mushrooms.

Based on the best buys of the current week, here are three balanced menus at different price levels prepared by Marion Rouse Budd, of the A and P Kitchen.

WAR DEP'T TO CARE FOR UNEXPLODED BOMBS

Assumes Responsibility For Delayed Active Bombs Also, Says Statement

BULLETIN IS ISSUED

In a Bulletin issued to Councils of Defense by A. C. Marts, Executive Director, State Council of Defense, on the subject "War Department assumes responsibility for disposal of all unexploded and delayed active bombs," some pertinent facts are revealed.

The Bulletin reads:

1. A clear definition of the responsibility, respectively, of the War Department and the Office of Civilian Defense (through U. S. Citizens' Defense Corps in the various communities) has been announced.

2. The War Department has accepted the responsibility of disposing of all unexploded or delayed action bombs.

3. The responsibility of the Office of Civilian Defense (through the local U. S. Citizens' Defense Corps) includes the following:

a. Disposal of incendiary bombs and extinguishing of fires.

b. Recognition, location, and report upon unexploded bombs for disposal by military personnel.

c. Immediate application of safety precautions at the site of unexploded bombs.

This responsibility extends only to the Continental United States, exclusive of military and naval reservations.

4. Temporarily, channels have been set up whereby a control center upon receipt of information of the existence of an unexploded bomb will cause a reconnaissance to be made, will have immediate safety measures applied and will report in detail to Regional Headquarters as soon as possible. Regional Headquarters will report the circumstance to Corps Area Headquarters, where appropriate action will be taken to remove the unexploded bomb.

5. It is expected that the above channel for reports will be shortened in the near future.

6. Persons discovering unexploded bombs or shells should be warned not to touch or handle them. Warning signs should be placed near the location of the unexploded bomb or shell. Approaches should be barricaded. Occupied buildings within 500 feet should be evacuated. The distance within which evacuation should take place may vary from 500 feet, in specific cases, and may be varied by regulations. Persons should be warned to keep away from walls and to open doors and windows of buildings within a danger zone above described.

7. Printed material, and training material for key civilian personnel are being prepared by the War Department and the Office of Civilian Defense for issuance in the near future.

May Extend "Gas" Rationing To Entire Nation July 1st

schools in the rationed area on May 12, 13 and 14. When a car owner presents his registration certificate at registration time, he will be given a so-called "A" card entitling him to purchase seven units of gasoline from May 15 to July 1.

The announcement immediately caused widespread and intense speculation over the number of gallons which will be allowed in each unit. That, Henderson said, will be announced sometime before May 15. However, it was predicted by informed officials that each unit would allow a car owner to buy between 2½ and five gallons of gasoline a week or between 10 and 20 gallons a month. Over a long-term, it was reported, gasoline consumption by the average motorist will be limited to approximately 10 gallons a month.

Besides the "A" card, four other types of cards—B1, B2, B3 and X—will be issued. Persons who use their car in business, such as defense workers who cannot reach war plants on trains, street cars or buses, will be allowed to apply on special forms for the other cards, entitling them to extra gallons.

Where the mileage can be fixed, such as in the case of defense workers known to drive a certain number of miles every day, the B cards will be issued. The B1 card will allow the car owner 11 units of gas; B2, 15 units; and B3, 19 units. The cards will resemble a meal or commutation ticket, and service station attendants will tear off, mark, or punch a square for each unit of gasoline delivered to the card holder.

Doctors and nurses and other essential workers who cannot determine in advance how much they might be forced to drive will be able to qualify for the "X" card. Commercial car and truck owners will not have to register, and owners of farm tractors and other implements used off the highways also will be allowed normal supplies of gasoline.

Owners of 16-cylinder passenger cars will get the same amount of gasoline as those who drive small "midget" autos or six and eight cylinder cars. Motorcycle owners will receive a smaller number of gallons for each unit.

Henderson, pointing out that deliveries of gasoline to filling stations had been cut 33 1/3 percent in the 17 Eastern States because of tanker sinkings and diversion of tankers to military use, said that rationing was the only way to assure equitable distribution of gasoline.

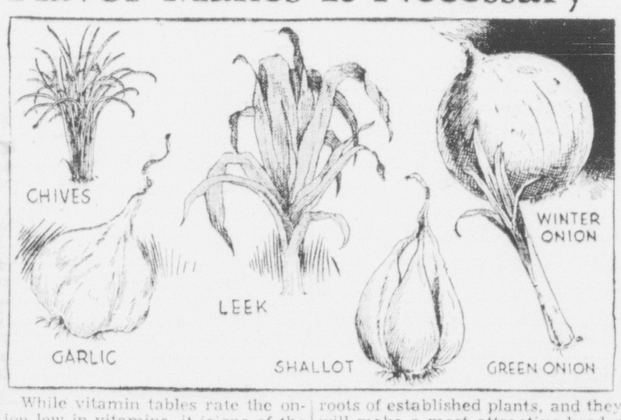
Onion Lacks Nutrition, But Flavor Makes It Necessary



While vitamin tables rate the onion low in vitamins, it is one of the most important crops for the Victory Garden. The reason for its importance of course is its flavor. For centuries, vegetables of this family have been used throughout the world to flavor both cooked dishes and raw salads.

In Great Britain last year onions were so scarce that they were used as prizes in raffles. Onion seed is selling this spring for many times its cost a year ago, owing to a shortage in this country. But amateurs have best success with onion sets, which are plentiful and reasonably priced.

Onion sets are small onions grown last year in crowded rows, so their development was arrested. Stored over winter, they are planted this year to produce green onions or mature, whichever you wish, in much shorter time than seed will do it. If you want green onions, use large sets planted deeply; for mature onions, use small sets, not so deep.

To introduce the onion flavor into salads and cooked dishes in a more subtle way than by the outright use of onions, the amateur gardener may grow chives and leeks.

Chives are perennial, and besides producing tubular leaves which add just the right accent to bowl salad and cottage cheese, they bear lovely mauve blossoms. You can start them from seeds, or by dividing the roots of established plants, and they will make a most attractive border for a garden path, living many years.

Leeks are always cooked, and many esteem them superior to onions in a stew. They are grown from seed, and should be transplanted for best results. The English gardeners pride themselves on exhibition leeks which may be grown in this manner: When the plants are about as thick as a lead pencil lift them, and set each one in a hole made with a dibber. Do not fill the hole, but merely cover the roots at the bottom with earth and let the hole fill naturally with washed earth. In rich soil the leeks will grow to a diameter of an inch or more.

If you want to accumulate a stock of garlic, assuming your consumption of this article is larger than the average, you can do it by planting the small garlic cloves. Shallots, another form of the onion used chiefly for cooking and having a mild flavor, are grown from sets which may be planted in the fall where the winters are mild, and in the spring in colder states.

Egyptian or perennial onions are true perennials, living many years in cold weather states. They are grown from sets planted in the fall and produce green onions as soon as the ground thaws out in the spring.

South Langhorne Man's Case in Court

The plaintiff-husband claims the sum of $2,000 and his wife, Margaret, who was injured in a two-car accident October 6, 1940, in South Langhorne, claims the sum of $3,000.

The husband-plaintiff testified he was operating his car with his wife and two daughters as passengers on a Sunday afternoon when it collided with the defendant's car at the intersection of Trenton avenue and Durham Road in South Langhorne.

He testified as to the extent of his wife's injuries and numerous inconveniences the accident caused them.

He further testified that his wife's health has been ruined and that she is not able to do her housework completely as she used to and that her "disposition has changed."

Members of the jury are William S. Nortenheim, Trevose; Rev. Walter C. Pugh, Yardley; Katherine E. Ferry, Bristol; Sarah McCrea Chapman, Washington Crossing; Ward R. Strawn, Pleasant Valley; Lester J. Allen, Cornwells Heights; Claude A. Trauger, Ferndale; Isabelle R. Cullen, Bristol; Calvin Eakin, Springtown; Linford R. Stauffer, Quakertown, R. D. Charles E. Hobart, Quakertown and David C. Baskin, Upper Black Eddy.

Resuming the trial yesterday morning, Dr. Howard G. Fretz took the stand and testified he treated and examined Mrs. Collins for injuries to her leg and body. The physician made 21 visits to the Collins home.

The plaintiff husband, recalled to the witness stand, said he paid $16 a week to a woman who did the housekeeping while his wife was recuperating.

Samuel Tatcher, Phila. automobile repairman, estimated the damage done to the car.

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 23—Two verdicts, one because he was the defendant in a $5,384.70 truck-automobile damage case, and the other involving a counter-claim of $92.26 filed by him, were returned in favor of Charles Eliassen, 26, Kintnersville, who lives near Riegelsville.

Eliassen, who was being sued by George E. Hunnewell, 53, 2257 North Second street, Philadelphia, was given a verdict in his favor by a jury which deliberated nearly two hours on Tuesday afternoon.

In a counter-claim filed by Eliassen against the Philadelphia motorist, the same jury returned a verdict of $92.26 in favor of the defendant who became a plaintiff in the counter suit.

Judge Calvin S. Boyer presided at the trial which began on Monday afternoon and involved a truck and car collision on Route 611 at Sycamore Road in Riegelsville December 11, 1941.

Contradictory was the testimony of the car-truck accident because the plaintiff-Hunnewell's witnesses insisted that the defendant's car turned out of Sycamore Road into Route 611 and the defendant's witnesses insisted he was travelling on Route 611 all the time.

Witnesses for the Kintnersville defendant included George Good, Ottsville garageman, who offered a bill of $92.26 representing the repairs made to the Eliassen car; Joseph F. Holtmeier, Riegelsville butcher, who testified he heard the plaintiff remark that he was "looking at a clock at the diner to see what time it was when the accident happened" and a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Walter Holtmeier who said she noticed that one man, the driver in the truck, was looking at the clock as his car went toward the center of the highway.

The plaintiff, Hunnewell, who claimed personal damages of $5,000 and truck damages of $384.70, and his helper, Hercules Stokes, insisted that the defendant's car swung out of Sycamore Road into Route 611 striking their truck and forcing them into a field.

A jury Tuesday returned verdicts in the case of George H. Spielman, Emily Spielman, a minor, by George H. Spielman, her guardian and Margaret Harr, a minor by J. Lloyd Harr, her guardian, against Peter Schnable, of Quakertown. A verdict for $148.17 was awarded George H. Spielman and a verdict for $30 was awarded Margaret Harr, both of Perkasie. The plaintiffs brought suit against Schnable, following an automobile accident in Sellersville on May 24, 1940.

Trial got under way this morning in the case of Titus Y. Yerger, Perkasie real estate man, against William Kehr, of Hilltown township. The plaintiff brought suit to recover from Kehr, an amount alleged to be due him as a commission on the sale of two tracts in Hilltown township consisting of 32 acres.

Members of the jury are as follows: Eleanor D. Large, Doylestown; J. Howard Cliffe, Ivyland; Ruth Bassett, Bristol; Elsie Schoffstall, Oakford; Keith M. Rosser, Bristol; William Lynch, Bristol; Manassa B. Barndt, Sellersville; Samuel M. Robbins, Bristol RD; Alfred R. Breece, Yardley RD; David R. Lewis, Perkasie RD 2; William S. DeCoursey, New Hope RD 2; and James T. Skillman, New Hope.

Attorney Donald B. Smith, Sellersville, opened the case for the plaintiff this morning in Judge Keller's court. Kehr is represented by Robert H. Grim, Perkasie.

Kehr, the defendant, was called for cross-examination by the plaintiff counsel, as the first witness in the case. He testified that he had placed the sale of the Hilltown tract in Yerger's hands on January 24, 1941, naming a price of $6500, but that he later, in October, 1941, raised the price to $8500 which included the farm buildings and stock.

Some Changes Made In Voters' Registration

comparatively light throughout the voting districts of Bucks County.

The Registration Department will not be able to register any voter now until May 25th, when it will be reopened for a new period.

Last week less than 100 voters registered. Twenty-seven men and women registered on Wednesday evening and 11 on Friday evening, when the department remained open for the convenience of those who could not register during the day-time.

Nine registrants reported on Saturday afternoon before the present registration period, which began December 5th, 1941, formally closed.

The new registrations stack up as follows: Republicans, 107; Democrats, 31, and No Party, 19.

No Party to Republican, five; Democrats to Republicans, 23, and Republican to Democrat, seven.

Primary Election is May 19th and voters having failed to register will not be able to vote and may not register until five days after Primary Election Day which would be May 25, when a new registration period will begin.

General Martin Plans To Aid Farmers of State

State, where my long training and experience can help my fellow-Pennsylvanians.

I will tell you why. For more than forty years I have been a soldier and a civil servant of this Commonwealth. I served you as Auditor-General and State Treasurer for eight years.

And, all of my life I have been a soldier. I went to the Philippines in 1898, as a green country boy from Greene County. I served this Nation in three wars, including five major campaigns in France.

I know my State as well as any living Pennsylvanian. I am no political carpet-bagger. I was born on a Greene County farm. This State has always been my home. My life has been lived in the rural areas of Pennsylvania. I know Pennsylvania as a farmer boy, as a soldier, as a citizen, and as a State official.

I want you to know that I know your problems in War and in Peace. You farmers have been harassed and regulated and be-deviled for ten years. Now, as we fight the greatest war in the long history of this blood-stained planet, your problems are multiplied.

Like myself, every one of you was hurt by the Long Depression. Now we are being hurt by this war.

You are threatened by it just as the people in the towns and industrial areas are threatened. Sooner or later enemy planes will be over our eastern sea-board. I tell you and our military staff experts could tell you that every acre of our fair Pennsylvania fields, every farm and rich valley, is within the danger zone.

Our farm country may be called upon to take the back-wash of war from our cities and great industrial areas. There may be refugees—our own people—who must have shelter and organized help. There may be sudden mass evacuations that must be guided to safety areas. Roads may be crowded, as French refugees crowded the highways of North France in June, 1940. There may be troop movements across the State with all the problems this would create for our people.

Some one in authority must deal with these events if they come. Good intentions will not be enough. No man who has spent his life as a bureau chief or a legislator can deal with them.

Your Governor must know what to do and how to do it. You cannot learn how to control masses of humanity, hurrying armed forces and a wheeled avalanche of equipment by reading a circular. Writing a proclamation will not stop a panic.

The war already has come to the farms. You farmers of Pennsylvania have a long, hard row to hoe. You are hoeing it now.

Farmers are now feeling a shortage of equipment. Shortages that are cramping every industry are hurting the farmer. It will be harder and harder to get power-driven machinery, fertilizers, spraying materials and spare parts.

Hardest of all will be the problem of farm help. Farms do not farm themselves. My farm neighbors and farm friends in every farm county tell me that war industries and the call for fighting men are draining the man-power from every farm community in Pennsylvania. We must not forget that armies must be fed. We must not forget that farms as well as armies must have man-power.

I know it will be hard for you to get along this year. It may be even harder next year. But I want to assure you that as Governor of Pennsylvania I will give every possible help to the farms and the farmers of this Commonwealth.

And I know you will do the best you can. We all realize what this war means. If we lose it, generations may come and pass, before we can recover from the hard terms imposed upon us. Remember, Hitler has proclaimed that his New German Order, his "Germany Over All," will endure for a thousand years.

And, remember that in Axis-conquered countries the blow falls hardest on the farmer and the working man. The farmers of France—and I know they are good farmers and love their land as you love your own fields—now work from dawn to dark under the heavy hand of a Nazi farm boss. These men and women of France are slaves in the fields that used to be their own.

It may be hard to maintain our highways and main roads. I mean all the roads, the local and township roads as well as the State highways. I mean the country roads over which your milk and meat, your grain and wool and corn move to market.

As Governor I will use local road building material if war priorities stop the use of asphalt, cement and steel. We will turn to local stone, gravel and shale, to local labor and local supervision. War or no war, we must keep the roads open.

All my life I have been an advocate of Home Rule in our communities and local political units. Home rule is self-rule. The management of our schools, the location of our roads, the conduct of our elections; the public business of the community, must be in the hands of the people. Our great plan of Government calls for local, State and Federal governments. Each has its part and must not encroach upon the others. A centralized control from a distance is un-American and dangerous.

We are proud of our schools in Pennsylvania. They are the bulwark of our republican form of government. And let me tell you that the smallest one-room school in the foothills of this Commonwealth is just as vital to the future of America as the marble palaces of education in our cities. Our schools must not suffer, war or no war. They have woven together all our people. Our schools and our home training made every American soldier in the fox-holes of Bataan, the equal of five of the tough brown dwarf men of Japan.

Farm Pennsylvania is a religious Pennsylvania. Our farm folks have kept the faith of their fathers. Their ancestors demanded more than religious tolerance. They fervently believed in God. Unless our people are deeply religious, our form of government cannot endure. No dictator has any real religion. When we finally realize that back of the real America are the God-fearing lives of our forefathers, on that day we will be ready for an all-out war effort.

As Governor of Pennsylvania I will not forget the interests of farm Pennsylvania. I recognize the value of the genuine farm organizations of the State. I feel that the farmer is entitled to returns commensurate with the effort he must make to feed the workers and the armed forces of this country.

As your war-time Governor I will remember that the farms of this Commonwealth send far more than grain and meat and milk and wool to our great cities.

It is your sons and daughters, generation after generation, who renew and revitalize our cities. They give energy and drive to our industry and skill and brains to our professions.

You are not afraid of defeats or of losing battles. Down through the history of America you have had your roots in the soil. You have given America strength and patience and courage.

You are the people—and you have not forgotten—who fought at Lexington, Concord, Bunker Hill, Trenton, the Brandywine and Yorktown.

You spent that somber winter at Valley Forge while the gentry of Philadelphia and New York wined and dined the British and the Hessians. You fought at Gettysburg while hundreds were dying in the furious draft riots in New York City.

You were at Malvern Hill, at Fredericksburg, Antietam, Cold Harbor and the Wilderness. Yes, and along the Vesle and in the Argonne.

And now you must work and fight again. You still have your ancient fortitude. You are free men and free women. You know that this is not war in the ordinary sense of that terrible word. It is not a war that can be won a little or lost a little.

This, in terrible truth, is Armageddon. Upon us here, on the farms and everywhere else, depends the existence of religion and civilization.

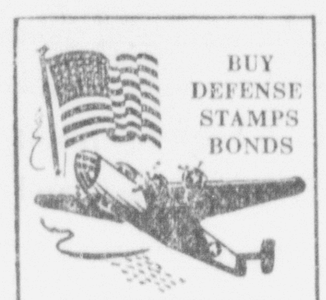
You have been told you must work and sacrifice and produce as you never have before. You have been asked to work from sunup to sundown, from dawn till dark. There is no doubt that you are willing to do all this. In turn you have the right to say to your Government: take your hands off so we can produce.

You want to sow and reap and build up your flocks and herds without feeling the paralyzing hands of Washington hindering your efforts for the long future. You may doubt that the men who preached the doctrine of scarcity, who plowed under the cotton, destroyed little pigs born and unborn and who restricted production in a thousand ways—can give you all-out leadership in all-out war.

You may wonder why there is a sugar shortage when we can grow sugar in 19 States and never a pound of that sugar need fear the submarines or any lack of ships.

But you are ready to face the future despite these doubts. You know it is a time of hardship, hard work, scarcity and sacrifice. You want sincerity, frankness and straight talk. You can take the bad news with the good.

I can help you and I can serve you through the evil days that are coming. I will not let you down.



Effects of Various Rationing Laws Are Being Felt

nesses that handle commodities and maintain delivery service.

Many farmers in this neighborhood have customers in Bristol to whom they deliver farm products. They, too, will come under this classification and when the tires on their trucks are worn out the deliveries must cease.'

Seemingly the only way to solve the problem is to go back to the "horse and buggy" days and either hire or purchase horses and wagons to carry on the delivery system until the war is over. It will not be surprising if in a short time we shall see our streets filled again with horses and wagons typical of bye-gone days.

The typewriters were turned over to the Rationing Board this week. The bicycles have been placed under control of the Board.

The Lure of the Garnish

Did you ever stop to think of how much eye appeal has to do with our foods?

A bare-legged youngster was reeling in a gorgeous brook trout one day, as I sauntered along the bank of a stream in Maine.

"They can't resist this pretty fly" he chuckled. "This makes six beauties in less than an hour."

Up the bank of the stream a dozen honey bees were delving into the depths of some sweet-scented, colorful arbutus.

"They can't resist the beauty of it" I said to myself.

And humans cannot resist the attractive salad or dessert. Add a garnish to a plain dish of pudding or custard and the value of that dessert multiples instantaneously. A little whipped cream in fancy form; some sliced berries; a few scattered nut meats; some jelly — no matter how simple or how complex the garnish, it turns a plain dessert into a fancy one.

Sugarless days need not mean "no desserts." Here are a couple of recipes for rennet-custards — desserts that call for no sugar, no eggs, no baking or no boiling. Make these, add your favorite garnishes, place the finished product before your guests — and your dessert problem is solved for the day.

English Rennet-Custard

- 1 package maple rennet powder
- 1 pint milk, not canned
- ½ cup chopped dates
- ½ cup raisins
- ¼ cup currants
- ⅛ teaspoon cloves
- ⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
- ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ cup cornflakes

Mix fruits, spices and cornflakes and divide among 5 or more dessert glasses. Make rennet-custard according to directions on package, pouring at once over fruits, spices and cornflakes. Let set until firm — about 10 minutes. Then chill in refrigerator.

Chocolate Date Rennet-Custard

- 1 package chocolate rennet powder
- 1 pint milk, not canned
- 20 dates

Chop dates in small pieces and divide among 6 dessert glasses. Make rennet-custard according to directions on package. Pour at once over chopped dates. Do not move until firm — about 10 minutes. Then chill in refrigerator.

O Father, God, we thank Thee today for life—for the privilege of living. Help us today to remember that "we live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths; in feelings, not in figures on a dial. We should count time by heart throbs.' May we ever be reminded that "he lives best who thinks best, feels the noblest, acts the best." Help us today to so act that we may show our appreciation for life by our proper living of it. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

WILD GREENS RATE VERY HIGH IN THE FAMILY MEAL PLAN

By Miss Edna Stephany

(Home Economics Representative)

Homemakers in Bucks County can take advantage of the many wild greens now available for the picking to get their daily green vegetable.

Dandelion, sorrel, dock, cowslip greens, water cress, lamb's quarters, purslane, and milkweed are some of the wild greens that can be used as food. Only the young and tender leaves and sprouts are suitable to use.

To prepare the greens for eating, cut off wilted leaves, pithy stems, or roots. Wash thoroughly in several waters. Warm water helps to dissolve the dirt faster than cold water. Always lift the greens from the water as this lets the sand fall to the bottom of the pan. Six washings are none too many as insects cling to the leaves.

Any of the wild greens can be used raw in a salad just as you would any other green vegetable. It is best to keep the greens in the refrigerator to become crisp before using. Never let them stand in water for any length of time as they lose much of their food value. Greens lose some of their vitamins if stored too long before using.

In cooking greens use just the water that clings to the leaves after washing. The cover can be left on until the greens are wilted and then taken off to finish cooking. Cooking greens in an uncovered pan helps to retain their green color. Cook as quickly as possible until just tender. Season with salt and butter. Cream may be added instead of butter. Steaming also is desirable for cooking greens. Cooked greens can be combined with a white or tomato sauce, hard-cooked eggs, or leftover meat put in a casserole and baked for 30 minutes.

Sometimes a mild and a strong flavored green can be cooked together to obtain a more pleasing flavor than either one alone.

Wilted greens are a favorite of many families. To wilt wild greens melt 4 tablespoons of bacon or other fat and add ¼ cup of mild vinegar. Pour this over two or three quarts of washed greens cut in small pieces. Add salt, cover, and cook until just wilted. Serve at once.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

Hailed as one of the most suspenseful pictures of the year, "Suspicion," now at the Bristol, co-starring Cary Grant and Joan Fontaine, is a gripping mystery romance played in an English countryside setting.

Alfred Hitchcock directed the film, which revolves about the misdeeds of a charming adventurer and the fears and suspicions of the woman he marries. Her belief that he intends to murder her leads to the stirring climax of this unusual offering, which is based on the novel by Frances Iles.

GRAND THEATRE

Four Technicolor cameras flew with the Royal Canadian Air Force, James Cagney and action-director Michael Curtiz in Warner Bros.' epic of the air, "Captains of the Clouds," at the Grand.

Under the direction of Natalie Kalmus, with Winton C. Koch assisting Director of Photography Sol Polito behind the lenses, they recorded in brilliant red and blues and greens, yellows and scarlets, the vast, sparkling lake country of Ontario, the swift flight of fighter planes, the impressive scenes of Canada's Royal Air Force troops in review.

Famed aerial photographers Elmer Dwyer and Charles Marshall flew in the big camera ship, a tri-motored Stinson called "Alice the Goon," big enough to operate the camera on a dolly track. Starting several months ago on a location trip that all told lasted more than four months, the camera men undoubtedly put more of Canada on film than had ever been photographed in Technicolor before.

RITZ THEATRE

Penny Singleton's ambition to have several of her sorority sisters of Beta Sigma Phi appear with her on the screen in "Blondie Goes to College" was partially realized when Carol Adams was cast in a role in the picture. The film is now at the Ritz.

Is Harvard's face crimson . . . as Maxie paints the town red! "Slapsie" Maxie Rosenbloom wins his "H" for hilarity . . . and knocks Harvard for a roaring goal. The film is at the Ritz.

BIG TRAP-SHOOTING CONTEST OPENS ON SUNDAY, WITH FOUR CLUBS SHOOTING AT NEWPORTVILLE

The biggest trap shooting contest to be held in lower Bucks County in several years will begin Sunday afternoon when teams from four local sportsmen's clubs assemble at the traps of the Newportville Rod and Gun Club to shoot out the first match of the four-match tournament.

To the winning team in the four matches will go shooting jackets and the individual high scorer for the four matches will be awarded a ten dollar sporting goods order. Participating clubs include The Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association, Newportville Rod & Gun Club, Edgely Rod & Gun Club, and the Rohm & Haas Gunning Club.

Following the first match, which will be held on the Newportville Grounds this Sunday, the second match will be held the following Sunday, May 3rd, on the Bristol Grounds. The third match will be held on the Rohm & Haas Grounds on May 10th, and the final match will be held on the Edgely Grounds on May 17th. All matches are scheduled to start promptly at one p. m. In the event of inclement weather the entire schedule will be advanced one week.

Considerable interest has been evidenced by local blue rock shooters in the tournament, and it is believed that all of the matches will draw large crowds of spectators. Friendly rivalry among the clubs is already high, resulting in part from a three-way shoot held last year. So that all members of every club may have an opportunity to participate, the highest score of an equal number of members from each team, but not to exceed seven, will be counted in the tally toward the final standing of the teams.

The complete rules for the tournament, which were drawn up last week by delegates of the four clubs, include the following:

1. One Match to be held at each club grounds.
2. All matches will consist of 50 birds.
3. Standard trap loads.
4. One man from each Club participating shall be appointed to act as a committee of referees.
5. Referee's decision final.
6. Highest score of equal number of shooters. (Not more than seven.)
7. Starting time: 1.00 p. m. prompt.
8. Fifty targets and 50 shells—$2.50. Twelve-gauge shells must be purchased on club shooting grounds.
9. Fifteen dollars to be contributed by the three losing Clubs for the purchase of shooting jackets for the members of the winning team.
10. To be eligible for prize on winning team, each member must shoot in at least three matches.
11. In case of tie, those Clubs tied for first place will shoot on neutral grounds, to decide the winner.
12. Individual high scorer for the four Matches will receive an order for $10.00 to be good at any sporting goods store.

John Slaven, who prior to his entry into the United States Army, was a member of the Bensalem High School faculty and who served as assistant athletic coach, was entertained by Mrs. George Vandegrift at Cornwells Heights last week. A gathering of 40 chatted with Slaven, who is being transferred to Camp Roberts, in California. After serving a period in the officers training school, he has attained the rank of Lieutenant.

While in this section, Monday, he stopped in at Bensalem High School and talked to many of the students. Walter Fields, who taught in the Bensalem District at Penn Valley, accompanied Slaven on his rounds.

While at Bensalem, Johnny tried desperately to advance the court game at the Owl institution. He succeeded in his endeavors to a certain extent and grabbed the "Little Three" conference championship. He annually set the Bristol Basketball League afire with his dexterous shots as a member of the Profy five.

* * *

Young Herby Yates, Bristol High School's freshman third base guardian, last year, is awaiting his call from the Navy. The Maple Beach lad signed up a short time ago and represents probably the youngest boy yet to join the colors, being but 17 years of age. A good hitter last Spring, he failed to return to school at the Township this semester.

* * *

Ten teams in the Burlington County League across the river will play a 54-game baseball schedule. Practically every community of repute in the area is represented in the organization.

* * *

Woody Wetherhold, Bensalem coach, thinks soccer-playing schools produce better basketball players than those that do not engage in the sport. Soccer, according to his idea, develops better footwork. And a basketball court is no place for an awkward boy who cannot cut and turn properly at top speed.

Early schoolboy baseball returns favor the pitchers over the batters. Light hitting or good pitching has marked the frays. Either the twirlers are "hot stuff" or the swingers are all "squib hitters." You name it?
